We've now been trained to regularly swab, spit, and give up ownership of our bodily substances to corporations and government run centers. These fluids hold the data of our DNA, personal information, and identity. Can we take saliva exchange back into our own hands? You can participate by collecting the saliva of friends and strangers. Central to this exchange is the consensual negotiation of its terms of use.

A project by Lauren Lee McCarthy.
Design by Wylie Kasai.

HOW TO COLLECT SALIVA

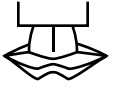

Search: Find someone's saliva you'd like to own.

Describe: Have the donor describe themselves and take notes.

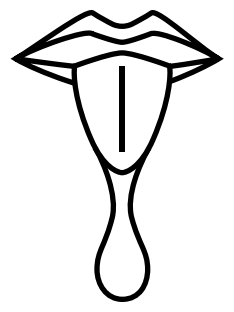

Negotiate: Establish the terms of their saliva and add additional terms.

Collect: Ask them to lick the desired page.
